

Ref: SSM/ENG./2026/E- 10 UG
Date: 05 JUNE 2026

NOTICE

2nd Semester Internal Retest

It is hereby notified that students who missed the previous internal examinations are required to submit a project on the following papers:

Date	Time	Subjects
Monday, 08/06/2026	11:00 AM – 2:00 PM	AEC Compulsory; AEC MIL Alternative English
Tuesday, 09/06/2026	11:00 AM – 2:00 PM	DSC Multidisciplinary English; SEC Proof Reading English

Project Topics:

1. AEC Compulsory English

Write a CV for the position of a Junior Editor at a publishing house.

2. AEC MIL Alternative English

Discuss R. K Narayan's The Man-Eater of Malgudi as a moral allegory

3. DSC Multidisciplinary English

How does Lady Macbeth impact the tragedy of Macbeth in Macbeth?

4. SEC Proof Reading Project Submission

Compare both incorrect and correct versions of the following paragraph and use proofreading symbols and marks appropriately.

Incorrect paragraph:

Famne came, ghastly stagering, horrible beyond words. In malabar, in Bijapur, in orissa, and, above all, rich the in and fertile provincee of of Bengal, man and women and little children died in their thousands daily for lack of food. They dropped down dead before the palaces of calcutta; their corpses lay in the mud-huts of Bengals innumerable villages and covered the roads and fields of its rural areas. Men were dying all over the world and killing each other in Battle; usuall a quick death, often a brave death, death for a cuse, death with a purpose; death which seemed, in this mad world on of ours, an inexorable logical of events; a sudden end to the life we could not mould or control. Death was no common enough everywhere.

Correct Paragraph:

Famine came, ghastly, staggering, horrible beyond words. In Malabar, in Bijapur, in Orissa, and, above all, in the rich and fertile province of Bengal, men and women and little children died in their thousands daily for lack of food. They dropped down dead before the palaces of Calcutta; their corpses lay in the mud-huts of Bengal's innumerable villages and covered the roads and fields of its rural areas. Men were dying all over the world and killing each other in battle; usually a quick death, often a brave death, death for a cause, death with a purpose; death which seemed, in this mad world of ours, an inexorable logic of events; a sudden end to the life we could not mould or control. Death was common enough everywhere.

*Only handwritten hard copies are allowed. Mention your name, course (honors/multidisciplinary), college roll number, and the paper title on the front page.

Dr. Arnab Baul
Associate Professor & Head
PG Department of English
Surya Sen Mahavidyalaya
Siliguri

